Page proofs, along with an order blank for reprints, will be sent directly to the author from the Allen Press. Proofs must be corrected and returned promptly to the Editor within 72 hours. If the corresponding author anticipates being absent when proofs are delivered, they should indicate their temporary mailing and e-mail addresses where proofs should be sent. Substantive changes in proof may be charged to the author. Reprint orders should be sent to the Allen Press, not to the Editor or the Secretary of the Cushman Foundation.

APPENDIXES

Lengthy numerical, locality or taxonomic data subordinate to the text should be assembled into one or more separate, numbered appendices following the references.

TABLES

All tables must be double-spaced on separate sheets, each labeled with the author's name and the table number in the top middle of the page. Tables that are particularly detailed and complex should be prepared at the appropriate size, camera-ready for the Allen Press. Experience for correction of errors on original tables will be charged to the author.

ILLUSTRATIONS

Photographs, artwork and drafting are expected to be of professional quality. Computer-generated illustrations should be examined critically and reduced for quality, clarity, and reproducibility. Material to be printed on glossy paper should be mounted with a protective cover on stiff, opaque stock. Figures on plates should be uniform in contrast and density, printed on a contrasting (usually black) background. Page numbers that are grouped together (e.g., Figures 1 and 2) should be separated by a blank line or table. Labels, numbers and symbols used in the text shall be chosen with the final reduction in mind, as should magnification information in the caption. Illustration identification shall be marked with its number and the author's name in the upper right corner. The numbering of the illustrations must correspond to both their order of appearance in the text. Submit both copies of the illustrations separated from the text.
